Condensed Homoeopathic Materia Medica

ABIES CANADENSIS (Ab-c.)

Craves meat, pickles and other coarse food; has a gnawing sense in the epigastrium and tendency to eat beyond the capacity of digestion; the eating is followed by distension of the stomach and hard beating of the heart; has a pain beneath the right scapula; shivers as if the blood was turning to water, lies with the legs drawn up, irritable, canine hunger; has burning and distension at the stomach and abdomen with palpitation; chills run down the back, as of cold water between the shoulders. Its principal indications seem to be the inordinate appetite and the craving for coarse food.

Clinical: It is especially useful for women with uterine displacements; has a sore feeling at the fundus, better pressure; thinks the womb soft and feeble. As if the lung and liver were small and hard.

ABIES NIGER (Ab-n.)

Has a pain in the stomach after a hearty meal; a knotted-up sense, as of an undigested hard boiled egg in the stomach; is hungry and wakeful at night, but has loss of appetite a. m.; is constipated; is hysterical and low spirited; feels as if something had lodged in the chest and had to be coughed up; the heart's action is slow and heavy; is worse after eating. Its leading indication seems to be the "sense of an undigested hard boiled egg in the stomach."

Clinical: Is principally a stomach remedy, its principal characteristic "the sense of an undigested hard boiled egg." Dyspepsia from tea and tobacco. Chronic intermittents with pain in the stomach.

ABROTANUM (Abrot.)

Has burning, ulcerative pain in the stomach worse at night; suspicious vomiting; stomach feels as if swimming in water; has sharp pain especially in the ovaries and joints; has pain in the back worse at night, causing restlessness, better motion; has pain especially in the wrists and ankles; emaciates upward; is worse in cold air. Its most marked indication seems to be metastasis.

Clinical: Is principally a rheumatic remedy, and especially useful in metastatic conditions, e. g. suddenly checked diarrhoea followed by irritation of the heart, epistaxis, bloody urine, anxiety, trembling or piles; suddenly checked rheumatism followed by violent caraiac symptoms; mumps shifting to mammae or testes, etc. Bleeding from naval of infants. Great relief when diarrhoea sets in, like Natr-s. and Zinc, reverse of Calc. When Aeon, and Bry. fail in pleurisy and a pressing sense remains in the affected part, or side. After influenza, child weak, prostrated and has a sort of hectic fever. Itching chilblains. After an operation on the chest for hydrothorax or emphysema, when a pressing sense remains.,

ABSINTHIUM (Abs.)

Has horrible dreams compelling one to walk about in great distress seeing all kinds of visions; has vertigo on rising and tends to fall backward; the urine is usually deep orange in color and of a horrible odor; the child is nervous, excitable and sleepless. Its leading indication seems to be the horrible dreams.

Clinical: Its action is similar to alcohol, but its chronic effects far more serious. Principally a nervous remedy, especially useful after the abuse of alcohol. Convulsions preceded by trembling and ushered in by screaming. Typhoids with sleeplessness and congestion to the base of the brain. Prolonged spasms of children. Mushroom poisoning.

ACALYPHA INDICA (Acal.)

Has haemoptysis, progressive emaciation, is gloomy but unwilling to die, has cough with expectoration of pure bright blood a. m., dark clotted lumps p. m.

Clinical: Its chief indication is: severe fits of dry cough with expectoration of blood. Spluttering diarrhoea, feeble expulsion, noisy flatus, bearing down pains, tenesmus, worse a. m. Haemoptysis, other remedies failing. Insipient phthisis, haemorrhage, no fever.

ACETANILIDIUM

Is morally depraved, has high blood pressure, faint, head feels enlarged, the breathing difficult, the heart weak and irregular, the feet and ankles swollen, the mucus membranes blue.

Clinical: Asthma, seizes and clenches the hands of those about one at any cost. Thrombosis of the lower limbs from weak heart. Susceptible to colds, cyanosis and collapse.

ACETICUM ACIDUM (Ac.-ac.)

Has burning thirst for large quantities of water, wants only water, though there may be no thirst in fevers, the water agrees; the urine is copious and pale; the skin hot; is emaciated, weak, sensitive to cold; has hot sour eructations; one cheek red, the other pale; burning in the stomach and abdomen, better lying on the stomach; genitals relaxed, feet swell; sleeps best lying on the stomach or abdomen; anguish of mind, and sometimes confused, that she does not know her own children; eyes sunken, surrounded by dark rings; tongue pale and flabby; sensitive to cold; lying on the back prevents sleep. Its leading indications seem to be: profound anaemia, diarrhoea, night sweat, feeble pulse, emaciation and cough.

Clinical: Chronic diarrhoea of emaciated children. Diabetes, with or without sugar, great thirst, weak, pale emaciated. Uterine haemorrhage: apply vinegar locally over pubes, same way after labor. Prepuce thick, fissured, cannot be retracted, itches fearfully. Croup, membranous, face bright red, sweat. Fever: low, profuse sweat and diarrhoea; hectic, skin dry, hot, red spot on l. cheek, copious night sweat. 5 drops 5 times a day, injected, is said to cause nasal polypi to drop off. When used as a compress, is saliva runs from the mouth, tonsils swell and suppurate after every cold and are usually worse in Autumn and Spring, sneezes in the sleep without waking, varicose veins in the throat, has tonsilitis if the habitual foot sweat is suppressed, abdomen is distended, swollen and hard, constipation, piles protrude during urination, worms are apt to pass in the stool, urine very offensive, frequent and yellowish, toes cramp and are better drawing up the limb; the child sits in a corner and gives confused answers; is worse in wet weather and in the Spring and Fall.

Clinical: Affects all the glands. Is valuable in loss of power, paresis of the pharynx and Eustachian tubes with clucking sounds on swallowing and sneezing, the air being forced into the tympanum too easily. Aneurism of the aorta, palpitation, chest full and painful and the thorax swollen close to the sternum. Every form of mania as soon as the sexual desire is increased. Painless symptoms predominate, pain is the exception. Abscess behind both ears, discharge copious, offensive, like old cheese or spoiled cheese, and purulent, especially after scarlet fever. Worms, nausea, vomiting, violent colic. Phthisical condition of the chest, herpetic eruptions and indurated testes.

BARYTA SULPHURICA (Bars.)

Is very anxious, especially with the fever, always in a hurry, suspicious, loss of willpower and marked irritability, especially in the p. m., faints even to unconsciousness, physically anxious, desires and is relieved in the open air, especially worse a. m., forenoon, night, after a hearty meal and bathing; she is worse before and during her menses, better walking in the open air, scalp itches, pains appear especially in the sides of the head, the eyes worse from light, vision becomes dim on exerting it, roaring in the ears, hearing impaired, nose dry internally, pain in maxillary glands, pressing in the stomach after eating, waterbrash, pain in the lower limbs and restless sleep.

Clinical: Piles, external; constant moisture at anus. Leucorrhoea, copious, smarting, the menses scanty. Corns sore, sting, burn, are painful. Warts small, sting.

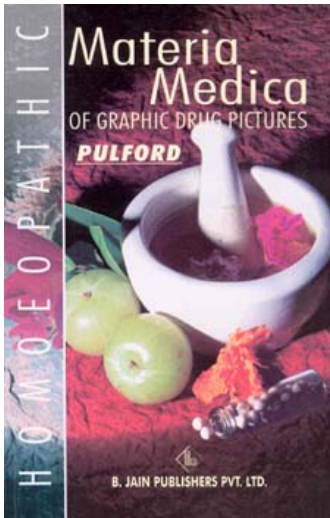

BELLADONNA (Bell.)

Has burning, heat and redness to which dryness may be added, in the very highest degree, the heat so intense as to leave a sense of heat in the examining fingers (Hyos. has a similar sense, only not so intense, and the heat left after the examination is left in the part of the patient touched by the examiner), the carotids throb violently, head hot, body cold, eyes suffused and brilliant, pupils fully dilated and sensitive to light, face, body and throat a beautiful red (in the reaction, pale), hot and dry, great thirst craving for lemonade which agrees, active, sensitive and restless, pulse full, rapid, hard and strong, pains are clutching, stabbing and like the sweats, come and go suddenly with violence though they may last any length of time; sleepy but cannot sleep, muscles jerk and twitch in the sleep, subject to vertigo which makes one feel as if sinking through the bed, anxious, sensitive to touch, noise and especially jar of the bed and bright light, is worse from 3 p. m. till either midnight or 3 a. m.

Clinical: Neuralgia: reflex, especially in women, depending on uterine and ovar troubles; ciliary, eyeballs feel enlarged, pain shoots into the head, often photophobia and asthenopia; facial, either from uterine or rheumatic troubles, pain better at night, returns next day; ovarian, tender, bearing down, pain shoots up sides and across lower abdomen, or especially of life ovary, pain extends up and down left side, tender; of diaphragm. Chorea: especially in muscles of left side; as soon as she retires at night in the side lain, the muscles will begin to jerk and prevent sleep. Headache: that either affects the occiput or begins at that point, violent and shoots up to the vertex or down the spine, bending the head forward seems to pull up on the spine; at times seems as if a bolt was driven from the neck to the vertex with every beat of the heart; often the whole neck is lame from the distress in moving the head; these headaches may be neuralgic in women with uterine disturbances or may be associated with cerebro-spinal meningitis, or neuralgic, as if the top of the head would fly off; of hysterical girls having much pain in the back of the neck. Delirium: restless, tendons twitch, starts up suddenly; wild imagining of rats, crazy sense about the head, moves about, changes subject constantly; tremens, fright and trembling, cannot remain in one place; the two marked characteristics of the delirium and insanity are the mental and physical restlessness in which the victim cannot remain in one position or place and when talking constantly changes subjects. Mania, puerperal, very suspicious, talks of a variety of things, constantly changing subjects, or speech is disconnected, sees vermin. Insanity, melancholic, apprehensive, talks of becoming crazy, or suspicious* or talks incessantly, constantly changing subjects. Melancholy, puerperal, sleepless, sighs and moans all the time. Nausea: in uterine or spinal troubles, efforts to vomit; vomiting and nausea from pressure on the spine and cervical region, palpitation, menses suppressed. Menses: painful, irregular or suppressed, hysterical or epileptic form spasms during the period; or too copious and early, dark, clotted, severe pain in back through the hips and down the thighs. Endocervicitis, nervous, hysterical symptoms, womb engorged, cervix hypertrophied, organs sensitive, especially the ovaries. Labor, during: pains do not force down but extend upward into the sides and across the abdomen; os rigid; after pains: very sensitive, she feels that she cannot bear them, worse in the groins. Cough, nervous, excited on every attempt to speak. Pleurodynia, either side, in women with uterine troubles, in left inframammary region. Angina pectoris, left arm numb, irregular, trembling pulse, tremulous action of the heart. Heart catching pain about, in women, preventing respiration, palpitation and faintness. Spinal irritation, cervical and upper dorsal region tender to pressure. Acts upon the joints, especially of the hands, feet and wrists. Pain in the left inframammary region, dependent on uterine trouble. Labor, nervous chill during the first stage (Gels.). Rheumatic, nervous, fidgety women whose muscles jerk. Only second to Pius, in amenorrhoea, especially suppressed menses from cold or emotions. Rheumatism affecting especially the "belly" of the muscle worse motion, nervous and restless. Nervous cough on any attempt to speak.
