FOREWORD

Homoeopathy - The Humane Medicine A tribute to Humane aspect of Medicine

1989 saw the culmination of a decade long effort of late Dr Sarla Sonawala, with the release of of 'Manaviya Chikitsa' in Gujarat! (the 5th reprint now on stands!). This hook, which was targeted for the common man, virtually became a ready reckoner for the Gujarat of Colleges practitioners. She was inundated by requests to translate it in English. As she was already working on 'Prakruti Chikitsa' (part II of Manaviya Chikitsa) she thought she would do the translation after completing the work at hand. This was not to be. Fate decreed otherwise. She was suddenly snatched from our midst, by the cruel hands of time on 14th January 1995 with her wishes unfulfilled.

As a tribute to her teachings and the dedication that she showed for imparting Homoeopathic knowledge, We decided to fulfill as many of her works as possible. So after completing her 'Prakruti Chikitsa', principally handled by Mr Arun Shroff, we decided to try our hand at the translation of 'Manaviya Chikitsa' to English.

Once again Homoeopaths came to rescue. Dr Nina Doshi and Dr Rashmi Nagar. both editors of The National Journal of Homoeopathy. took on this daunting task and translated in record time. Truly admirable!

Today, we present to you, this 1st of a 2-part English version of the Manaviya Chikitsa, aptly called 'Homoeopathy - The Humane Medicine'. The translation may miss out in the literary flavour- the hallmark of Sarlaben, but definitely will not be found wanting in contents and lucidity of the language

Our endeavour will be to complete the 2nd part will be a special offering to Sarlaben in the Y2K. Once that is done, the task will be to translate 'Prakruti Chikitsa' and thus work will go on ...

And the dream continues ...
