Foreword

A new book introducing Bogers Boenninghausen's Characteristics and Repertory, is in itself a very important thing for the homoeopathic community. A book written by an eminent practitioner Dr Farokh Master is a present to homoeopaths. So being invited to write a foreword is a big honour and I am very much pleased to do so.

When CM. Boger died in 1935, homoeopathy was on the decline in most parts of the world. He was one of the last great homoeopaths with a vast experience and was able to condensate all the homoeopathic experiences of his time in his repertories. In most parts of the world it took about 50 years, until homoeopathy came to life again. When the renaissance of homoeopathy started, there were hardly any teachers with practical experience. So it was not easy to comprehend the value of these old books and to find the proper way of using them, thus making it hard to make use of all the former experiences.

India was one of the rare places with a continued homoeopathic tradition and thus practical experience from there played a very important role in the revival of homoeopathy. In Europe, practitioners quite often had to learn from Indian colleagues how to use the old repertories. And so, finally, the value of those can be revealed more and more now.

In doing so, the only way to avoid misinterpretations is to get acquainted with the philosophy of the repertory and then use those books in practice. This is the present, Dr Farokh Master has given us, to share his experiences and to give us a tool at hand to make our own experiences. This tool comprises the genius of both CM. V. Boenninghausen and CM. Boger, who updated the books of Boenninghausen in order to face the needs of the 20th century and up to now.

It is a book written in the spirit of practical usability. Dr Master's vast experience with homoeopathic practice and with this repertory opens the way to get familiar with this approach to case analysis. It is an approach characterized by clearness and reliability. And, what is of great importance is that, it is teachable. So this enables us to unearth a real treasure for homoeopathy.
