Preface

Many people have played a part in the manifestation of this book. All the patients upon whom we have attempted new treatment protocols and unusual remedies deserve our thanks. Some of our 'Eureka' moments have arisen from these experiments, while others have come to nothing. This book contains the results of our Eureka moments. We have written here the methods and protocols which work for most people most of the time. We have described some of the common reasons why our chosen remedies do not work and what to do about them.

In this preface I am using the 'we', whereas in the rest of the book I use T. That is because I here wish to acknowledge all the hidden work contributed by Nyema Hermiston. Nyema has again edited the book within an inch of its life. She has provided much of the background research and thoroughly revised each chapter. The chapter on Nutritional Deficiency is Nyema's progeny. The writing of a book is only one small part of its creation. That writing necessarily has to arise out of hours of discussion and workshopping. Then there is the tossing around of ideas with reference to clinical feedback. Those ideas have to be knitted together into a workable and useful whole without which they remain unusable strands of thread. Nyema has played a major role in all these aspects and the creation of this work lies in her hands as well as my own. I however, accept the responsibility for any errors that may become apparent in time.

I would also like to acknowledge the draft comments made by two of my colleagues: Linda Beaver and Christine Pope.
