PREFACE

On publishing English version of Homoeopathy in Japan

Since I set up the first homoeopathic college, the Royal Academy of Homoeopathy Japan (RAH), and started the activities for homoeopathy in earnest in 1997, the number of homoeopaths has increased 121 from 1 in these 7 years, and each homoeopath has been active very hard. It could be understandable that the Japanese nation was waiting for homoeopathy, judging from the rapid development of the Japanese homoeopathy centres.

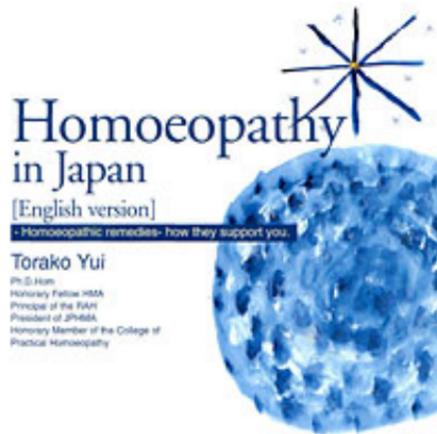

I do know this spread of homoeopathy is owing to helps from the College of Practical Homoeopathy and another homoeopathic colleges, and the Homeopathic Medical Association and another homoeopathic associations, Helios Homoeopathy Ltd., J & D Black Ltd., The Homeopathic Supply Co., and other homoeopathic pharmacies and manufacturers and many many individual homoeopaths from all over the world. Many homoeopaths were invited to teach the RAH students in Japan and in London (for the RAH's annual event in the U.K.), and all of them worked very hard for giving their knowledge so that die Japanese nation could receive the blessings of homoeopathy. I would like to express my gratitude here all over again.

I deeply respect the establishment of homoeopathy in Europe, from in the U.K. down. I am hoping homoeopathy in Japan to be modelled after their good points with developing Japanese own style for the Japanese people.

I believe that homoeopathy itself will establish and develop powerfully if we all pull together for spreading homoeopathy, not being antagonistic each other, saying 'we have a different idea or a different philosophy'. We, homoeopaths, have one aim. In order to achieve this, it all depends on how we spread this medicine, which has no side effects, and is gentle to body and mind. I have determined to make effort unceasingly.

This book had also an intention of homoeopathy to be rooted in Japan, where no foundation of homoeopathy when I started to introduce homoeopathy to the nation. However, it could be my pleasure if it was used as a primer of homoeopathy by everyone in the world.
