PROSOPALGIA AND GLAUCOMA

Prosopalgia is pain of purely nervous character in facial muscles and bones, occurring in paroxysm, seldom accompanied by fever and inflammation, and hardly damaging the structure of the affected part.

Veneral diseases or the abuse and misuse of narcotics and anaesthetics or formation of much wind in abdomen owing to high living on diet and drugs which disorder liver function, cause faulty blood circulation and create disposition to catch influences of exposures and change of temperature, which are the main factors to bring on the trouble of neuralgia.

Glaucoma is an insidious disease of the eye, characterised by pain and tension within the eye-ball, affecting the optic nerve and gradually diminishing vision to blindness, the causes being almost the same as those of Prosopalgia.

Right-Sided Resseedies :

Kaimia 200—Pain in facial muscles and bones of jaw : violent, stitching or lancinating, tearing, burning, radiating: downward to neck, shoulder and teeth of upper jaw ; associated. with stiffness and numbness ; <in open air.

Note :—Dr. Cowperthwaite has recommended its use in 0.
