HOW THE MATERIA MEDICA SHOULD BE STUDIED

For the beginners the easiest way to study Materia Medica is to follow the pattern given below:

- A. The source - books like those of Gibson Miller, Robin Murphy's Lotus Materia Medica, Encyclopedia Britannica will give you a lot of information.
- B. Provings - It is essential to know how the remedy was introduced into the Homeopathic Materia Medica. Hahnemann's Materia Medica Pura, Hering's Guiding Symptoms and Allen's Encyclopedia would be of great help. (Warning: be very careful of newly introduced remedies in our literature that have cropped up due to over-enthusiasm of some doctors who intend to gain cheap publicity by proving a remedy in a weekend seminar or who prove a remedy not by the conventional method as mentioned in the Organon of Medicine).
- C. The introductions to remedies given by William Boericke, Clarke's Dictionary of Practical Materia Medica and Phatak's Materia Medica will give you an idea of the main spheres of action and the major symptoms of the remedy.

Note: The italicized information in the above mentioned Materia Medica is more important than the rest of the text.

- D. The next step is to learn the general symptoms. Frans Vermeulen's Materia Medica and Bhanja's Materia Medica best give this.

JUDGING THE SUSCEPTIBILITY

This is best done after the second or third visit, when you will definitely know to which category the patient belongs.

A) HIGH SUSCEPTIBILITY

These are the patients whose immune system is very strong. They have a lot of peculiar, queer and rare physical symptoms and good mental symptoms. The totality of the case will indicate not more than two remedies. If they are given the appropriate remedy, they will make significant inroads into health.

Sometimes a second remedy is needed which can be found very easily - that which is complementary to the previous one.

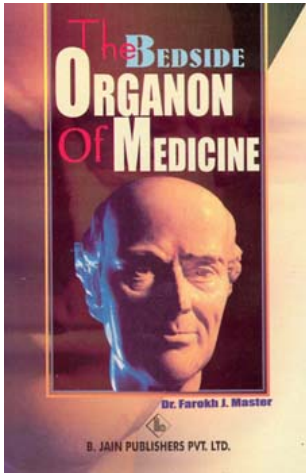

These patients will send hundreds of new patients to you and make you famous with their stories of the miracle that happened to them with Homoeopathy

B) MODERATE SUSCEPTIBILITY

Here the immune system is moderate. The patient does give good general symptoms, mental symptoms, desires, aversions etc.

Three or four miasmatic remedies cover the defence mechanism of the patient. Here you have to start with the remedy that will remove the upper layer, then the second layer, etc.

Thus, after a long time of correct treatment with Homoeopathy, their level of Health will improve.
