Historical Background

DESCRIPTION :

Ignatia amara is a beautiful tree with long, twining, copious, smooth branches. The leaves are opposite, stalked, ovate and entire, a span long and the flowers are very smooth, very long, drooping, white, and scented like jasmine.

Fruit - the size and shape of a middling pear.

Seeds - Scarcely an inch long and very bitter.

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION :

A native of the East Indies and Phillipine Islands.

PREPARATION :

The seeds are reduced to powder in a mortar, placed in hot water during the pulverisation. The first three potencies are made by trituration. The seeds are about the

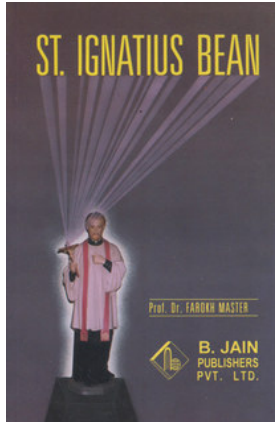

EVOLUTION OF MIND IN TIME DIMENSION

Idealism

IDEALISM

Ignatia children get their idealistic views from parents or society. When they go to school, they know what their parents expect out of them and hence they work hard. They remain sincere and always pass exams with flying colours. This is reinforced by their parents who comment that their son/daughter is one day going to be a big Doctor/Engineer.

Young boys and girls have to deal with all these fantasies of who they will become and what is expected out of them. "My son Karan is going to become an eminent Homoeopath". Karan has heard that since he was five years old. He goes out to pursue his career and starts getting successful, so the hopes and dreams of his parents become fixed.
